Annual Report

1999 / 2000

From the Minister

I am pleased to present the 1999–2000 Annual Report of the Nova Scotia Provincial and Regional Libraries. Many accomplishments have been achieved and milestones met during this year.

Our libraries have made progress in meeting the minimum standards for library service and through increased collections, staffing, and open hours have provided improved services to Nova Scotians. The grant from the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation greatly assisted in service improvements. The additional public access computers have been warmly received by the public across the province and the regional training centres will assist Nova Scotians to cross the digital divide.

These improved services and increases in technology are particularly appropriate as we celebrate the 50th anniversary of the regional library service in Nova Scotia. Public libraries have come a long way since the Annapolis Valley Regional Library first began providing service in 1949—from bookmobiles travelling dirt roads delivering books to virtual libraries and online resources at everyone's fingertips.

I was pleased to be able to participate in the first Hackmatack Children's Choice Book Award ceremony last spring. This program is a tremendous example of how public libraries partner with children, parents, teachers, booksellers, writers, and publishers to promote one of government's priorities, literacy.

Nova Scotia libraries, particularly those in the Halifax area, were delighted to greet the National Librarian, Roch Carrier, when he visited us as part of his cross-country tour to learn about library issues from coast to coast.

I would like to thank the staff of the Provincial Library and the Regional Library Boards for continuing to improve public library services to Nova Scotians and I look forward to working with you as we move into the 21st century.

Jane Purves
Minister of Education

From the Acting Director

In 1999–2000 libraries joined other agencies in preparing computer systems for the year 2000. Fortunately the new year came in without a hitch.

The first highlight of 1999–2000 was an $855,300 grant from the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation. The grant, part of the Gates Library Initiative, is intended to increase technology access for people who would otherwise not have access to computers and the Internet. The money provided 114 Internet workstations in 56 public libraries, and regional library training centres in Halifax, Truro, Yarmouth, and Sydney.

A second highlight was the visit of the newly appointed National Librarian, Roch Carrier, in November. He visited Halifax as part of a cross-Canada tour to listen to and learn from librarians and library workers.

A third highlight was preparing for the first Hackmatack Children's Choice Book Award. Participation exceeded our greatest expectations with more than 8000 young readers.

Our first regional library, Annapolis Valley, celebrated its 50th anniversary in 1999, while Eastern Counties and Western Counties Regional Libraries celebrated 30 years of service.

The automation process continued with two more regions implementing on-line circulation. This brings us to within a year for completing the process!

The flow of work for automation assistance and technical services functions was reviewed during the year, and improvements have been made in the level of service provided to the regions.

In 2000–01 we look forward to completing the implementation of on-line circulation and acquisitions in all regional libraries. From there we will begin planning for the move to the next generation of NcompasS.

Thank you to the staff of the Provincial Library and the regional libraries for their dedication and hard work. Without them these accomplishments would not be possible. Thank you also to Wayne Doggett, Executive Director, Policy Branch of the Department of Education, for his support throughout the year.

The Regional Public Libraries Funding Review Committee will present a report on funding for regional libraries for the period 2001–04. As well, we will be working with the RCMP to extend the Adopt-a-Library Literacy program, begun in Pictou-Antigonish Regional Library, to other parts of the province.

Nova Scotia Gates Library Initiative

Fifty-six of Nova Scotia's public libraries received a gift from the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation. The project is intended to give people in low-income areas better access to computers and the Internet.

The $855,000 grant and more than $300,000 worth of Microsoft software provided 114 public-access computers. Training centres, each equipped with ten computers, were also established in Halifax, Truro, Sydney, and Yarmouth. These training centres will be available to both library staff and community groups.

As part of the initiative eight staff from the Nova Scotia Provincial Library and the Cape Breton, Annapolis Valley, Halifax, and Western Counties Regional Libraries attended an administrative and training session at the Gates Center for Technology Access in Seattle in October. The session provided valuable training and information on how to implement this program and offered an opportunity for staff to meet others in similar roles from other provinces.

National Librarian Visits

The recently appointed National Librarian, Roch Carrier, visited Halifax on November 30, as part of his cross-country tour. He toured several Halifax school, public, and university libraries, participated in a "town hall" meeting to hear from the many library sectors represented in Nova Scotia, and met local librarians at a reception in the Legislative Library.

One of Roch Carrier's stops was at the Terence Bay Elementary School, where he was met in the library by an enthusiastic Clifford the Dog, who was preparing for a book fair. He also visited Sir John A. MacDonald High School to meet with a group of enthusiastic students and teachers.

Hackmatack!

The Hackmatack Children's Choice Book Award enjoyed an amazing response in its first year. Over 400 readings groups registered, embracing 8000-plus young readers ages 9–13 from the four Atlantic Provinces. As groups from schools and libraries registered, they received the reading kit of author information, activity ideas, reading logs, and charts. By March 2000 preparations were underway to call in the votes for the children's choice favourite for fiction and nonfiction author. Nova Scotia writer Sheree Fitch won with If You Could Wear My Sneakers for nonfiction. Kenneth Oppel with Silverwing was the fiction choice. Photos from the award ceremony and information for 2000–2001 can be viewed at www.hackmatack.ca.

Automation nears completion...

The End Is Near!

A basic change in the regional library system—a quantum leap—has taken place with little fanfare over several years. As we near the end of the process of automation, this annual report is well-timed to celebrate the achievement.

What a job! Ironically, automating requires individual handling of each and every patron and catalogue record in as short a time as humanly possibly. And we've done it!

Congratulations to all on successful participation in one of the biggest tasks the library system has ever taken up, and on near-completion!

All the regional libraries now offer on-line catalogues of their holdings. The conversion of regional library manual catalogue records into NcompasS has been completed. At the beginning of the year three of nine regional libraries were using online circulation; three had implemented online acquisitions. During the summer of 1999 the regional library web sites were updated using a LibraryNet grant.

During the current year Pictou-Antigonish, Colchester-East Hants and South Shore regional libraries implemented on-line circulation. As well, mobile libraries in the latter two regions were outfitted with equipment to enable on-line connectivity. Circulation transactions from mobile libraries remain a challenge.

An improvement to the NcompasS software enabled one region, Annapolis Valley Regional Library, to allow patrons to place their own holds, a feature that has been available in Halifax for some time.

Planning is in place for all regions to have circulation and acquisitions on-line by spring 2001.

The Government Libraries Consolidated Catalogue has been both developed and refined. Eight government libraries are now regularly uploading records from their local catalogues to NcompasS and five other libraries are in the development stage.

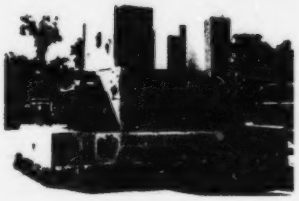
Space-Age Summer Reading Program

Summer 1999 brought Canadian astronaut Steve Maclean from Houston, Texas, to libraries in Nova Scotia. "Launch Yourself Into a Good Book" took on a special meaning as Steve enthralled children and parents alike from Sydney on day one to Shelburne on day three of a whirlwind tour of libraries in the province. A province-wide summer reading theme has been promoted over the last few years by regional libraries visiting and sending promotional materials to local schools near the end of the school year.

With summer reading programs, the Hackmatack Award, booksellers-sponsored "Battle of the Books," and publisher-sponsored "Read 99 in '99," libraries are encouraging young readers to become lifelong readers.

News in the Regions



Students were hired through LibraryNet to build or upgrade several Regional Libraries' web sites in summer 1999. They met at mid-summer in Halifax.

Annapolis Valley

Regional Library has celebrated its way through the year, as 1999 was its 50th anniversary. Each branch held a party. Trivia contests and bookmark competitions ran throughout the year. An Annapolis Royal volunteer group built a float depicting life in a library in 1949 and 1999 that won awards in most of the parades it entered over the summer.

In the summer over 1,500 participants enjoyed computer tutorials, story times, craft sessions, drama club, "Investigators Science Club," and many other programs. Summer youth workers were instrumental in delivering the annual Nova Scotia Libraries Summer Reading Program. A successful youth entrepreneurial program at the Wolfville Memorial Library Community Access Program (CAP) site produced a multimedia CD of Wolfville.

The Kentville Branch library was approved as a CAP site in partnership with the Career Resource Centre.

Funding increases and implementation of standards for regional public libraries resulted in extended open hours in some locations and expanded staffing in others.

Cape Breton

Regional Library will mark its 50th anniversary with events throughout 2000.

Leugh Seo, a joint on-line catalogue of the Gaelic holdings of this library and the University College of Cape Breton Library, neared completion.

In September a new vehicle replaced the 12-year-old Victoria County Bookmobile.

The region hosted the annual conference of the Library Boards Association of Nova Scotia, which was highlighted by a period banquet at the Fortress of Louisbourg.

Branch hours were extended in Ingonish, North Sydney, Sydney Mines, and New Waterford. Ingonish expanded by 200 square feet.

Colchester-East Hants

Regional Library's web site was revamped and expanded by students hired with a grant from Industry Canada's LibraryNet program.

After six years of useful support the Colchester-East Hants Friends of the Library has disbanded, but plans are well underway for the creation of a library foundation to carry on their work. Teen Friends of the Library is thriving.

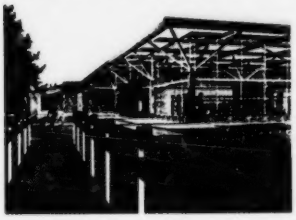
Cellular technology was installed in the mobile library in preparation for expanding on-line circulation.

Elmsdale branch converted the meeting room on the upper floor into a computer/quiet study area.

Further improvements to staff working conditions were approved, including greater sick leave benefits and vacation entitlements.

Elaine Breault-Hammond of PEI, short-listed for Hackmatack in 2000, reads to children in Cumberland region.

Architect's rendering, Keshen Goodman Public Library.



Cumberland

Regional Library marked the end of an era with the retirement of Chief Librarian Beverly True after 30 years. Frances Newman was appointed Chief Librarian and a new Assistant Librarian was hired in January 2000.

The "Launch Yourself Into a Good Book" Summer Reading Program attracted 435 children. Many participated in a series of programs including web quests, moon rocks, games day, stories and rocket-making!

Cumberland held many fundraisers throughout the year including used book sales, yard sales, raffles and a "Christmas Book Tree" that was a variation on the adopt-a-book program.

With the establishment of CAP sites at Springhill and River Hebert, all branches now offer at least two free public-access computers.

Eastern Counties

Regional Library's board outlined the library's vision and its role in linking rural communities in its strategic plan created in 1998–1999. In the past year, its 30th anniversary, the library has made headway toward achieving our vision. The library has increased spending on collections, improved distance access to library services, and reinvigorated the library's web site. The library has offered a vibrant series of programs for all ages. The circulation of materials is on the rise in most branches, as is the use of public-access computers.

Branch libraries have all surpassed the minimum standard for staffing and open hours, but the breakdown of a bookmobile and the forced retirement of the other unexpectedly removed library services from the 70 percent of Eastern Counties' population that lives in the more rural communities.

The challenge is to form a network that will link rural patrons to library materials and services. The library is working closely with community partners to devise new service opportunities to meet current patron needs and offer potential for development.

Halifax

Regional Library completed planning and design for the new Keshen Goodman Public Library, which will be located in the Clayton Park area of Halifax. Funded by a 1992 bequest of Marion Keshen, this 25,000-square-foot, single-level library will have a capacity of over 100,000 volumes and improved access to public use computers, including a family computer area.

A second new branch was approved by Halifax Regional Municipality Council in March. The 12,000-square-foot Tantallon branch is scheduled to open early 2001. Council also approved funds for a new mobile library and WebPAC, a web-based public-access catalogue.

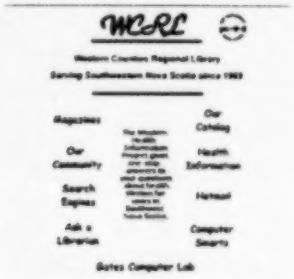
The Halifax Regional Library officially opened the Jeddore-Musquodoboit Community CAP site in January. The Musquodoboit Harbour Public Library and the Centre by the Sea house a total of eight new computers.

The Halifax Regional Library Children's Reading Support program was awarded the 1999 Canada Post Literacy Leadership Award for Nova Scotia. The program, offered at Captain William Spry Public Library and the Halifax North Memorial Public Library, helps children overcome reading difficulties and develop a love of books.

In September, the Halifax Regional Library received a LibraryNet Best Practices 1999 award from Industry Canada for its leadership in making innovative use of the Internet in public libraries.

RCMP Constable John Kennedy introduces Adopt-a-Library to citizens on the Pictou waterfront.

The first automated transaction in a South Shore Regional Library bookmobile.



Pictou-Antigonish

Regional Library saw Ann Ripley retire after 28 years as Chief Librarian. Eric Stackhouse was appointed Chief Librarian in September.

A partnership was begun with local police agencies to deliver a unique children's literacy initiative. The Adopt-a-Library Literacy program, spearheaded by RCMP Constable John Kennedy, is the first of its kind in Nova Scotia and has received enthusiastic community support.

The Library's first official fundraising campaign concentrated on the corporate sector and helped establish and strengthen partnerships in the local community.

Two communities, Maryvale and Pictou Island, were the focus of a pilot project to evaluate new and cost-effective ways of delivering library services to rural areas. During the next year expansion to other communities is planned.

South Shore

Regional Library has analysed and acted on advice and information garnered during enquiries from staff and users last year. Their input has resulted in new procedures, increased communication, and new enthusiasm and ambitions.

The recent past has seen small annual decreases in the number of items borrowed and parallel increases in the use of "wired" resources. More people than ever are searching the catalogue, submitting requests by email, and mining electronic databases from the comfort of home terminals. Public-access terminals at branches are also heavily booked. The Library's role as provider of information, education, and recreation to all citizens remains constant as formats and ways to use resources evolve in step with the information age.

After years of preliminary work, the first South Shore Regional Library materials were checked out electronically at the Lunenburg Branch in mid-March. The two mobile branches now offer on-board automated circulation and searching services, and there is now an even deeper commitment to mobile library operations.

Western Counties

Regional Library celebrated its 30th anniversary in October with an open house. Since 1970 the regional library has grown from three branches and two bookmobiles serving Digby, Shelburne and Yarmouth, to ten branches providing service to the three counties.

The Western Health Information Partnership was able to expand this year thanks to a $40,000 CAP pilot project grant. It enabled the library to hire a project manager for a year to update the web site and to train library staff, CAP volunteers, and the public.

Through LibraryNet funding the Yarmouth Community Heritage Page was added to the web. The site highlights the built heritage of the town and municipality. Through a second grant a special section called the Collins Heritage Preservation District was added. In February, LibraryNet cited this page as one of the Best Practices sites. A third LibraryNet grant resulted in the publication in English and French of Computer Smarts, an on-line tutorial that teaches the basics of WordPad, Hot Mail, and Netscape Navigator in a series of 30-minute lessons.
